Sales-Gossner.
Mrs. Mabel Sales, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sales of Franklin, was married yesterday at 10:30 a.m. to Rev. Schleicher, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They returned to Connellsville Saturday and are living temporarily at 106 Highland avenue. About two months hence they plan to locate at McKeesport. Mr. Gossner is a drummer on the Pittsburgh Division of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. He has been here with the railroad company for five years. He will have similar employment at McKeesport.

Carrie Kenyon Auxiliary.
The regular meeting of the Carrie Kenyon Auxiliary to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church will be held Thursday night at the home of Mrs. Louise Mitchell, in the White Front Apartments, North Pittsburg street. The committee is composed of Miss Elizabeth Williams, Miss Madel Loomis and Mrs. A. H. Gleiford.

Shilo Lodge.
Shilo Lodge No. 103, Ladies' Auxiliary to the B. & R. T., will meet Thursday afternoon in the Knights of Pythias Hall.

Miss Gladson Hostess.
Miss Mercedes Gladson will entertain the D. M. I. Club Thursday night at her home in South Eighth street, Greenwood.

Successful Card Party.
Large and successful was a benefit card party given last night in the basement of the Parochial School Hall by the Confraternity of Christian Mothers. More than one hundred and twenty-five guests were present and spent very enjoyable evening at five hundred. Prizes were won by Mrs. May, Miss Margaret Krush, Mrs. Henry Welwig, Mrs. Charles Ross, Mrs. Welwig, Miss Margaret Harrigan, John Rush and Lawrence Maloney. The appointments were in keeping with Washington's Birthday and the hall presented a very attractive appearance. American flags and bunting were used in decorating. Following the games a delicious lunch was served. Too much credit cannot be given Mrs. F. E. Koehler, who was in charge of the party, and her committee for the successful manner in which the affair was carried out. Not the slightest detail in arrangements was overlooked.

Epworth League Meets.
About twenty members of the Epworth League of the First Methodist Episcopal Church attended the regular business and social meeting held last night at the home of Miss Helen Carroll in South Prospect street. Business of a routine nature was transacted after which a social hour was had. Refreshments were served.

N. C. D. Class Meets.
Twenty-seven members attended the regular meeting of the N. C. D. Class of the First Methodist Episcopal Church held last evening at the home of Mrs. S. F. Detwiler in Cedar avenue. Mrs. L. S. Michael presided. Mrs. R. W. Allen read the lesson study. A social hour was held and dainty refreshments were served by the committee composed of Mrs. Detwiler, Mrs. C. E. DeMuth, Mrs. C. C. Crispin, Mrs. Gossner and Mrs. Mary Colborn. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. L. S. Michael in Morell avenue, Greenwood.

Reception for Junior Holy Name.
A reception for the Junior Holy Name Society of the Immaculate Conception Church will be held next Sunday night in the church.

Wagner-Lohr.
Miss Sara Irene Wagner and Howard Lohr, both of Connellsville, were married Tuesday in Cumberland, the marriage being announced by the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lohr of York avenue. Mr.

Party at Dunbar.

Mrs. Anna Hughes gave a children's party of charming appointments last night, from 8 to 10 o'clock at her home at Dunbar in observance of the sixth anniversary of the birth of her daughter, Betty. Fourteen little guests were present and spent a very enjoyable evening at various games. A dainty luncheon was served. The decorations were carried out in pink and white and in the center of the table was a birthday cake adorned with six candles. Little Miss Betty received a number of pretty and useful gifts. Mrs. Hughes was assisted by her sister, Mrs. Fred Golden.

Mrs. Beverly Harris Identified by Kin as Gambler's Daughter

By United Press.
NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—"That's my second cousin, Susie Lee. No doubt about it," declared Dan P. McCoy of Lafayette, Ky., on the witness stand in the Harris annulment case today, indicating the pretty defendant.

Action in the suit of Beverly D. Harris, former vice-president of the National City Bank, to have annulled his marriage to the defendant, continued today around efforts of the counsel to establish her identity as one "Susie Lee," who lived in Tennessee and who was the mistress of a gambler.

But all the strenuous cross-examination of George Gordon Battle, Mrs. Harris' counsel, could not shake McCoy from his certainty that the Southern beauty, who claims to be the illegitimate daughter of Eli Raymond, celebrated gambler, was none other than the daughter of S. C. Lee, a cousin of the witness.

NEVER HEARD OF HER

The movies look to all sorts of sources for their material and there have been diggings in many strange fields. One talented young writer thought of trying out mythology. So he went to his general manager with the story of Diana.

The general manager viewed with some interest the illustration presented.

"Who is she?"
"Diana, goddess of the chase."
"Well, she's a pretty fair looker, but we ain't making any more chase pictures."

Firm, Plump Flesh!

MANY are the eyes that are turned to gaze on the well developed, healthy girl no matter where she may be—on the rapidly moving thoroughfares of glories graciously offered the beau fleur.

All eyes turn because we all appreciate the girl with the figure so firm and plump—the girl with radiantly red cheeks, cheeks that carry a touch of roses from nature's own garden—the girl with the sparkling eyes, keen and sharp—the girl with buoyancy and the swing of youth.

Not necessarily an out-of-doors girl. Just a girl with ever increasing blood cells. Just a girl filled with the vim and vigor of youth.

S. S. S. since 1824 has stood for increased blood cells. S. S. S. means Strength, Strength, Skin, Vitality—added energy. Take S. S. S. and watch the bloom of youth return to your cheeks. Watch that flabby ill-nourished flesh fade away before your eyes. Watch that S. S. S. will build them. If contains only pure vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is more economical.

THE TRI-STATE AND ITS EMERGENCY.

There will be a sympathetic interest throughout this section with the efforts of the Tri-State Telegraph & Telephone Company to successfully meet the extraordinary conditions imposed by the severe winter storm of last week. The company has had a rather difficult task in establishing and maintaining its service and resolved a staggering blow in the damage done to its lines by the storm. Not having an ample reserve fund to meet such an emergency it has become necessary, as a measure of self protection, to resort to a receivership.

The enterprise is local to Fayette county it having been organized and its capital supplied by our own people. Such undertakings ought always to be encouraged both as an evidence of our progressiveness and the pride we have in doing things on our own initiative and with our own resources.

It is conceded that there are certain inconveniences resulting from two telephone services. On the other hand there are distinct advantages, not the least of which is competition which has prevented an excessive burst in rates. Further, outlying sections and communities have been provided with telephone communication which otherwise might have been obliged to wait for years for such convenience.

It is hoped, therefore, that the Tri-State will be successful in meeting every phase of the emergency by which it is confronted and that it will be able to enlarge its usefulness as a distinctly Fayette county enterprise.

AUTOMOBILE CLUB MEMBERSHIP.

While there may be danger of duplication of effort through the creation of or membership in too many organizations, such an observation ought not to apply to the local automobile club. It is an organization having a field of operation and usefulness quite distinct from that of any other which has been established here. The rapid increase in the number of motor-driven vehicles makes more people eligible to membership than any other organization of similar character. The Youghiogheny Automobile Club therefore has an opportunity for useful service that is quite exceptional and which will be in direct ratio to the representation of automobile owners in its membership.

While advancing the cause of good roads is a fundamental object of an automobile club, there are other and associated activities which properly come within its scope. These are of immediate concern to the members and to the public generally.

Primarily an automobile club ought to be a community boosting organization, ready at all times to get behind any and every good thing intended to promote the progress and material welfare of the community. Membership in it ought to serve the further and no less useful purpose of creating a better understanding and relationship between the people who own and operate automobiles and who, as such, are presumed to be active and influential citizens.

An automobile club which represents practically 100 per cent of the owners of motor driven vehicles ought to be a factor of so much importance that it will give prestige to the community and draw public attention to it as a place where the people are real live citizens. Connellsville can have such an organization if the car owners give ready response to the call that has been made upon them to take membership.

McAdoo's $300,000
Contingent Fee

New York World (Dem.)

It would have been better if the whole truth about William G. McAdoo's employment by Edward L. Doheny had been brought out at the time he appeared before the Senate committee, or earlier. It would have been better if Mr. McAdoo had voluntarily gone into all the circumstances of his professional relations with the Doheny companies. As it was, it was left to the World to make known that under certain conditions Mr. McAdoo was to have received from the Doheny interests $300,000 more than he was in fact paid, and to Mr. McAdoo to offer a tardy explanation of his failure to make clear this point in his previous testimony.

Two Dreams of World Peace
Are Nation's Legacies

By LAWRENCE MARTIN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Two residents of the United States have gone into the beyond within a year. Two dreams of world peace remain as legacies to the nation those residents served.

Wilson and Harding had different visions of the means to prevent war. Both of them were called away before their dreams came true, though Mr. Harding had the greater satisfaction of seeing his program partially adopted. But, when he died, the Senate which balked Mr. Wilson had turned hostile to Mr. Harding's second step—the participation of the United States in the world court.

These two men had very different ideas about the peace program proposed by the other.

Mr. Wilson, for example, thought the armistice conference called by Mr. Harding was pretty much a waste of time.

Mr. Harding thought the United States ought to remain out of the League of Nations, which was Mr. Wilson's plan for peace.

But though they differed on methods, both men regarded as their chief mission efforts to make the United States the chief agency for ending war.

After he became President, Mr. Harding viewed with much greater sympathy than previously the Wilson program, because he came in touch with the influences which sought to defeat and ultimately did defeat American participation.

This was one reason he determined to go on through with his own efforts to establish some means of preventing wars. He was so committed against the League of Nations that it was impossible for him to espouse Mr. Wilson's program, and he believed that this country was against that. But, it was borne in on him exactly as it was borne in on Mr. Wilson, though in less tragic degree, that America must do something to prevent new wars.

I am very sorry that Mr. Wilson's program was not accepted, with reservations that would make it conform to American principles," Mr. Harding said one day while his ship was leaving Alaska in the summer of 1923, a few weeks before his death.

"The longer I am President, the nearer I believe that our full influence for peace has not been exercised. People do not realize the dangers that beset us. War is so easy to start, and right now it would not take much to start one."

Mr. Harding knew also that he faced a fight just like the one that broke Mr. Wilson.

"I suppose," he said, "that they will not after me the way they got after Wilson. We've got to do something; surely everybody can see that."

And now his world court plan is stumbling in the Senate foreign relations committee.

Our Expensive Peace Army

Public Service Magazine.

As Americans we love and long for peace. We hope for the day when war will cease and every sword turn into a plowshare or something equally as pastoral and profitable. That will help our pocketbooks, as well as our humanity.

As taxpayers most of the money we turn into the government goes for war, past or possible.

Yet American taxpayers are in the business of supporting a considerable army aside from the one that fights on occasions. That's an army, 4,000,000 strong, of governmental employees, from federal down to municipal. It takes a good many men and women, of course, to run the various divisions of this unnecessary and unprofitable burden of maintaining 4,000,000 public employees, together with all the endless waste that goes with it, they really have no ground to complain. If we put up with it, we have ourselves to blame for it.

Until the rank and file of American taxpayers come to feel and act the necessity of relieving themselves of this unnecessary and unprofitable burden of maintaining 4,000,000 public employees, together with all the endless waste that goes with it, they really have no ground to complain. If we put up with it, we have ourselves to blame for it.

Just Folks

Edgar A. Guest.

A FATHER'S THOUGHT.

This I want my boy to know When I tell him not to go, When I say he's not to go, When I check some little whim— Tis the love I bear for him.

Some shall think of pleasure's hour, Some shall think of saving, Of advantage, of all beauty, To lead some doubtful way. But his Welfare I alone Guard and cherish as my own.

No must know me through and through, Know in all I say or do. This is not lightly I restrain Some small pleasure he would gain; Even though I seem unjust, I would keep him perfect trust.

As his father, this I ask: To be fitted for the task. Draw no close, no closer than he Shall not lose his faith in me; Without shame, without pretense, Let me have his confidence.

Let him understand that I Never cheat him, never lie, Never play him false, or seek Profit from the words I speak. Let him know me to the end, As his one unsatisfied friend.

Stilts we're making some headway nationally. The budget system now in effect, together with other elements of statesmanship, enable the federal government to save $300,000,000 over and above expenditures in one year, to pay out $300,000,000 less than it takes in. That is fine. But it only serves to excite some of the boys, to whom their appetites for nice pleasurable diversions would need less for themselves.

But that is expecting a lot of a republic. Mr. Bryan, a great believer in pacifism, once said that the only way a great republic could reward a faithful citizen was by giving him an office. It is because this republic has acted on that principle of spills policies so much that we have this standing for sitting, as the case may be) array of 4,000,000 employees to support. The trouble's that a good many of those who succeed in finding jobs at the pie counter have not earned our gratitude by any service of distinguished faithfulness. Too many of the boys are there simply because of their fine abilities for "getting out the vote."

Still we're making some headway nationally. The budget system now in effect, together with other elements of statesmanship, enable the federal government to save $300,000,000 over and above expenditures in one year, to pay out $300,000,000 less than it takes in. That is fine. But it only serves to excite some of the boys, to whom their appetites for nice pleasurable diversions would need less for themselves.

Without questioning Mr. Bryan's orthodoxy in some directions, we need to get as far as possible from the horry of paying off the boys, be they faithful Democrats or faithful Republicans, in public offices that cost the taxpayers cold cash. One of the anomalies of our reform brotherhood is that their postures seem invariably to take the form of extending instead of curtailing the list of public payrollers.

In any case, a fee of $1,000,000 paid or contingent upon events, from the Doheny oil interests is not the kind of recommendation that the Democratic Party wants for a candidate for the Presidential nomination. If Mr. McAdoo cannot see that, he must be blinded by ambition. He should be blind to recognize that he is no longer available, as a candidate. Since he apparently does not, it is necessary to repeat what has been said before—that he has put himself out of the running.

NEW TRADE BODY POLICY

Special to the Courier
MOUNT PLEASANT, Feb. 27.—A permanent organization of a new rotary club was held at the National Hotel Monday evening when the following board of directors was named: John L. Ruth, Dr. John L. Burkholder, Howard Stoner, Arthur Page and Eugene Warden. Officers were installed at the dinner for all. The dinner was presided over by Attorney Eugene Warden. Nineteen visitors were present from Scotland.

New Chamber Commerce Policy

The Chamber of Commerce has had Secretary John T. Shidley deliver plates to members to be placed in their places of business to read as follows:

Member of the Chamber of Commerce Mount Pleasant. We as members of the Mount Pleasant Chamber of Commerce have entered into mutual agreement not to subscribe to any funds that have failed to meet an assessment of our chamber.

Annual Card Party.

The annual card party held by the Mount Pleasant section Council of Jewish Women at the National Hotel yesterday was the most attractive held there. Twenty-four tables were laid and bridge was in play. A very interesting program was given with Miss Margaret Utterman as reader and Miss Verna L. Lusk as singer. Miss Levin sang at the University Church Boston. The award won by Miss Barbara Johnson of the reading, Mrs. J. E. Madson, Mrs. A. W. Horner and Miss Edith Fitzpatrick of this place. Prizes were given by the National Home. The plus was bountifully decorated in white. The new rooms at the hotel were open to the women. The committee in charge was made up of Mrs. Mabel Brown, Mrs. William Robinson, Mrs. E. F. Lusk, Mrs. Florence Lovinsen and Mr. Herman Glick.

At the Hospital

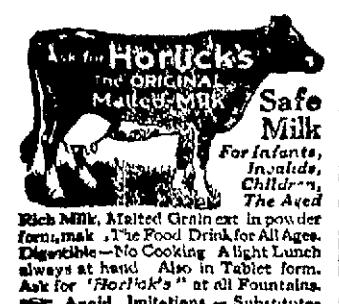

William Smith of West Pitt underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Mount Pleasant Hospital after noon.

Had No Diver's Suit

He is entitled to a claim for damage to a wetsuit which he had in a roll. A guarantee against mechanical failure was rejected by a New York jeweler retailer. He watched the jeweler handle the wetsuit and he found it free from the accident of the jeweler's woman who made the claim. She broke it back to the retailer a couple of inches after the purchase and complained that it was too tight. On the strength of the guarantees she demanded one more. The jeweler quickly ascertained that his wetsuit was true but when he examined the wetsuit more closely he found the wetsuit almost entirely covered with rust. The young woman was first unwilling to admit that she had been kind to him for any reason but finally admitted that she had worn it while riding a roller coaster. He checked out the jeweler could not see where the wetsuit was fault but he offered to replace the wetsuit at his cost. This offer was accepted but he took no further action with the jeweler.

Origin of the Collar

In the past year in Washington there is a new man dressed in the style of the Spanish conquistadores. The new collar has been put on about 18,000 sets. Mrs. Mary Kline, a process of winning them to the sales force, went in to see Honorable Lord Newton, who had a small residence in New York, where she was born. Mrs. Kline was doing the family's shopping on her summer day in 1922. It occurred to her that a shirt remained clean for a longer period than an collar so when her husband's shirts were dry she detached the collars from them. Subsequently she started to mailing detachable collars for sale to her neighbors and the demand for them reached such a pitch that before 1940 six rail factories of string collars as they were called in their infancy were established in Troy which still possesses the largest collar factory in the world.

Pueblo Indians Carry
Fetish When Hunting

The favorite hunting fetish among the Pueblo Indians was the mountain lion or cougar which they deemed the king of animals. Every Indian carried a fetish when he hunted and derived his power from it by putting his hand to his own and drawing it in his mouth—drinking the breath of the hunting—and praying to it, or rather the animal spirit it represented to help him.

The ceremony was indispensable at the beginning of a hunt. Then before following the trail the Indian imitated the roar of his patron beast to terrify and bewilder the game. He firmly believed that without these superstitious ceremonies he would stand no chance at all in the hunt but with them he was sure to succeed. The animals which were successful hunters themselves were the objects of reverent awe and the Indian was careful to invoke their aid that his own pursuit might be fortunate as theirs.

The hunter, when he struck a trail took a forked twig and placed it in front of a footprint with the fork opening backward. This was to trip the hunting game.

Where Correction Begins.

One Mother Says:
One of the first things parents should learn is that correction, like charity, begins at home. This is courteous not only to the child, but to the hostess, also. There is nothing more embarrassing to a hostess than to have a child constantly corrected and scolded in her presence.

Keeping Millions Free From Colds and La Grippe

W. H. HILL'S LIFE WORK

Colds cause more illness than any other human ailment. Realizing this 50 years ago, W. H. Hill determined to develop a quick-acting scientifically correct cold and grippe remedy.

Years of research brought success. Mr. Hill discovered a most remarkable formula. He backed it with energy, faith, integrity and a name that meant "satisfaction or money back."

Today more than 4,000,000 families—one-fifth of America's population—use and recommend Hill's Cascara Bismole Quinine.

Alone, or with touches of white camphor a fashion favorite. Luxurious black silks add to Hill's splendor, touched up by a few pearls, a cordovan or a bit of trimming.

Navy Blue

is important for frocks of twill, for the smart three-quarter length coat, or the costume suit. The severe tailleur is very practical and smart, of navy blue.

Bright Red

One of the new red tones which is blazing its way down the fashion highway. Popular for sports frocks, particularly. It is almost the shade of brick, a bit richer.

Powder Blue

A soft blue somewhat like the old Dresden blues with a lot of a greenish tint. Very bright and brilliant enough to receive a quiet welcome by many women this Spring.

Tealblue

A new shade of green which is receiving rapid popularity. It is darker than the almond green which is a carry-over from last season. Rather thin moss green. Sports dresses and frocks for informal wear. In this shade are very popular.

Oriental Red

Frocks are among fashion's favorites this Spring, with Oriental Red, a lovely dull Chinese red, a cross between lacquer and healthful Chinese red, top the list.

Oxford

Dark faded gray, in which or men's tunics are going very strong for the manly look. Becoming to many women.

Cape Effects

Short flary capes on spring suits and frocks, detachable capes on two piece costumes, cape collars and long cape effects on swagger sport costumes—all evidence the popularity and becomingness of the cape adjunct for Spring.

Three-Quarter Lengths

sponsored by Paris for several seasons, popularized by American designers this season. The fashion right coat length of the season, whether for topcoat, sports coat, dress coat or costume suit coat hovers around the three-quarter and seven-eighth length.

Scarfs Treatments

Since the line is the straight line, there must be some carefree adjunct to relieve its severity, and scarfs are among the most becoming and smartest of these smart treatments. Scarfcollars, separate or detachable, play a most important role in this popular Spring Play.

DR. ROBERT W. CLARK.

Dr. Robert W. Clark, 76 years old, of Pittsburgh, form or resident of Fayette county, died Tuesday in the West Penn Hospital, Pittsburgh. He was born at Lancaster and studied medicine at Lebanon, Ohio. In 1872, he was graduated from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania and later was located at Dubois and in Uniontown. He moved to Pittsburgh in 1888 and practiced medicine in the East End. He was a member of the Allegheny County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Association, American Medical Association, Blue Lodge, Chapter Knights Templar, Uniontown, and Syria Temple. He was a charter member and second president of the University of Michigan Alumni Association and a member of the Lancaster Country Club of Pittsburgh. He leaves his widow Mrs. Lila Schell

Clark; one son Major Robert W. W.

Clark, Jr., of Arcadia, Fla.; one daughter, Mrs. Burton J. Speck of Cleveland; two brothers, James L.

Clark of North Hampton, Mass., and Harry S. Clark of Uniontown; two sisters, Mrs. Letitia P. Maxwell and Mrs. Laura J. Long of Lancaster county, and five grandchildren.

The funeral service will be held

Thursday at 3 o'clock at the family home, 665 Maryland avenue, East End.

Casey Club, in Rare Form, Defeats Fiji Panthers at High School Floor, 35-31

Local Organization Shows Unexpected Strength and Delights Its Rooters.

READY FOR UNITY FRAT

The Casey Club's basketball team, playing in exceptional form last night, defeated the Fiji Panthers of Pittsburgh, a team composed of star performers of the college and semi-pro world. The score was 35-31.

The Casey organization uncovered some brilliant floor work and two scintillating shots in the final quarter when the going was slow clinched the victory.

Only small crowd was present but it was an appreciative one. Casey fans are now expected to turn out as their team has demonstrated beyond all doubt its ability to accomplish big things on the floor.

The players evidently expected to close with a rush and might have done so except for the wonderful guarding tactics of the purple and white outfit. In the final minutes the Panthers' attack was completely smashed and the ball could not be worked into the basket.

The Line-up:
Casey Club—35. Panthers—31.
D. Henry F Flemling
W. Pritchard F Roberts
Lowery C Ramsey
Buttermore G Kaiser
P. Henry G Williams

Substitutions: None.
Field goals—W. Pritchard 5; Flemling 5; Kaiser 4; Henry 3; D. Henry 3; Lowery 2; Buttermore, Ramsey.
Foul goals—D. Henry, 3 out of 7; Buttermore, 1 out of 4; Roberts, 1 out of 2; Flemling, 5 out of 7; Ramsey, 2 out of 3; Kaiser, 2 out of 4.

Referee—Bain.

High School at Monessen Loses By Score, 23-12

Playing at Monessen last night the Connellsville High School basketball team continued in its slump and was defeated 23-12. The only consolation out of the defeat is that it came at a time when it did not count against the chances of the Cokers in the W. P. I. A. League play-offs.

Fans are satisfied that the little wonders had to "hit the skids" sometime or other and are glad the bad period came before the entrance into the elimination series of sectional champions of the W. P. I. A. League in Pittsburgh. It is felt the team will be back to "normal" again before that time.

The Cokers seem to have lost their shooting power. In the game here last Friday against Norwin, Connellsville, while winning, did not display the usual neatness of play-aggressiveness carrying the team on. Then Saturday night matters were worse.

Last night there was little improvement and it is now up to the boys themselves to pull together and get back into their stride. Individuality has been cropping out, especially among one or two players. This is something that must be absolutely discarded to bring greater success to the team. The remainder of the week will be devoted to overcoming this obstacle.

In last night's game the Cokers made only one field goal, Niland getting this in the last 20 seconds of play, dropping one in from the center of the door. Monessen scored a total of five goals from the floor, each member of the team getting one.

The Line-up:
Monessen—23. Connellsville—12.
Sicht F Niland
Destefano P O'Donnell
Kent C Lafave
Dalo G George
Selepachak G Welsh
Field goals—Destefano, Dalo, Selepachak, Kent, Sicht, Niland.
Foul goals—Monessen, 13 out of 25; Connellsville, 10 out of 21.
Referee—Heckler.

Unity Fraternity Duck League Now Led by Mor-Frats

After various matters interfering with the Unity Fraternity Duckpin League for several weeks, a flock of games was rolled off last night. The Mor-Frats had a big night, rolling nine games and winning seven of that number. The Shun-Frats rolled off three games with the Opp-Frats and won all of them. The Mel-Frats won three and lost three during the evening.

Little Mountain College Has Released Noted Coach.

Centre college, the little mountain school in the wilds of Kentucky, has suffered a body blow. For Charley Moran, the man who put that college on the football map with a bang and then kept it there, has left. The college officials have released him from a contract which had four years more to run, that he might accept a more lucrative one offered by Bucknell college at Lewisburg, Pa. Their action

The Nelson Girls, contenders for the championship of Western Pennsylvania, will know tonight what their chances are in this titanic race. The Valley Girls of Pittsburgh, a famous combination, and bolder of the girls, will be born for a game.

The attraction is the biggest yet scheduled by the Nelson team.

The game will be at the Armory.

The usual double bill offered by the Nelson management will be featured but the girls will play first tonight in order to enable the Valley team to return to Pittsburgh for the night. The clash will be at 7:45 o'clock instead of 8:15 o'clock.

"THE WEB OF THE LAW" a romance of famous constabulary the Texas Rangers with Ranger Bill Patricia Miller and George Sherwood in the leading roles is the feature picture today and tomorrow at this theatre.

The locals of "The Web of the Law" is not altogether the West as nearly seen on the screen. It is really the Southwest described by the author as "a land lying along the banks of the Rio Grande called Texas." It is a man's land if there ever was one with trackless prairie, waterfalls, mountains, but during the day by a pitiless sun overwhelmed at night by an impeneable darkness with nothing but the far blinding stars to witness weird howl of the coyote the mournful hoot of the ground owl and the muffled clatter of the horses of those that ride in the night. Patrol of this no-man's land on the Southern Border rots upon the earth should one of a body of men known as the Texas Rangers and of those the Web of the law tells.

Friday and Saturday Jack Hoxie will be seen in "Where is the West?"

The Soisson

"THE EMPTY CRADLE" on view today at this theatre is a brilliant screen adaptation of Louis Morgan's story "Cheating Wives." It is one of the best attractions seen at this theatre in months. The picture is a true epic of womanhood and has a definite and unusual appeal to every man woman and child. Mary Alden and Harry T. Morey appear in the stellar roles. The whole story its baffling complications revolves around the great question will she or will she not place in the arms of another woman the babe which God gave to her? To divulge the outcome of the emotional struggle in arriving at her decision would be to rob pleasure from much of the enjoyment which this picture holds in store for them. The Frazee family will hold in place of honor on the hill at this theatre.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday John H. Bain of Broadway is presenting Alice Lake, tall in Moore, Tennessee Walker, Conigh on film and other well known stars in a series of entertainments at the Soisson.

The Orpheum

"THE FIGHTING BLADE" an leading attraction to view at this theater is a First National picture with Richard Barthelmes in the starring role. Once more Mr. Barthelmes will be seen in the ideal love. And once more he will do one of the best girls that I seen in his career to make love to this girl plays the gentle rôle with Edna May McCall a former star of the stage girl who has much dramatic ability. In the year that she has been in motion pictures and who is playing opposite him in the John S. Robertson production "The Fighting Blade" Mr. Barthelmes has been fortunate in having the prettiest girls in pictures for his leading women both in his starting vehicles and in the pictures in which he was merely lending him, for he has been a screen star to play opposite beauties such as Lillian Gish Dorothy Gish Claire Seymour and Marjorie Daw and Margaret Clark.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday The Eleventh Hour will be shown.

At Death's Door

Ten years of stomach trouble reduced me to a living skeleton. I had attacks of pain that doubled me up like a jack knife and I was as yellow as a gold piece. No medicine or doctor helped me and was really at death's door. A brother advised me to try "Mama's Wonderful Remedy" and I found it to be the only medicine to touch my case. It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the external oil from the recto in tract and allies the inflammation which causes practically all stomach liver and intestinal ailments including appendicitis. They glided up to the extreme top of the house. She opened the gate and led the way into what was practically an attic sitting room, decorated in black and white. Wide-swing doors opened onto the leads, where comfortable chairs, a small table and an electric standard were arranged. They were far above the tops of the other houses, and looked into the green of the park.

"This is where I bring very few people," she said. "This is where, even after my twenty-eight years of fraudulent life, I am sometimes myself."

There were feminine drinks and sandwiches arranged on the table. She opened the cupboard of a small sideboard just inside the sitting-room, however, and produced whisky and a siphon of soda. There was a pall of ice in a cool corner. From somewhere in the distance came the music of violins floating through the window of a house where a dance was in progress. They could catch a glimpse of the striped awning and the long line of waiting vehicles with their twin eyes of fire. She curled herself up on a settle, flung a cushion at Sir Timothy, who was already ensconced in a luxuriant easy-chair, and with a tumbler of red schnapps in one hand and a cigarette in the other, looked across at him.

"I am not sure," she said, "that you have not tonight dispensed an illustration." "What instance of one?" he asked.

"Above all things," she went on, "I have always looked upon you as wicked. Most people do. I think that is the reason why so many of the women find you attractive. I suppose it is why I have found you attractive."

The smile was back upon his lips.

He bowed a little, and, leaning forward, dropped a chunk of ice into his whisky and soda.

"Dear Lady Cynthia," he murmured, "don't tell me that I am going to slip back in your estimation into some normal place."

"I am not quite sure," he said deliberately. "I have always looked upon you as a kind of amateur criminal, a man who loved little things and dined well. You know how weary one gets of the ordinary code of morals in these days. You were such a delightful antidote. And now, I am not sure that you have not shaken my faith in you."

"In what way?"

"You really seem to have been engaged tonight in a very sporting and philanthropic enterprise. I imagined you visiting some den of vice and mixing in an equal with these terrible people who never seem to cross the bridges. I was perfectly thrilled when I put on your chauffeur's coat and hat and followed you."

"The story of my little adventure is a simple one," Sir Timothy said. "I do not think it greatly affects my character. I believe, as a matter of fact, that I am just as wicked as you would have me be, but I have friends in every walk of life, and, you know, I like to peer into the unexpected places. I had heard of this man Billy the Taxman. He beats women, and has established a perfect reign of terror where he lives. I fear I must agree with you that there were some elements of morality—of conforming, at any rate, to the recognized standards of justice—in what I did. You know, of course, that I am a great patron of every form of boxing, fencing and the various arts of self-defense and attack. I just took along one of the men from the symposium who I know was equal to the job. To give it a lesson."

"So did it all right," Lady Cynthia demanded.

"But this is where I think I re-examined myself," Sir Timothy examined the peculiar nature of his smile reassessing itself. "I did not do this for the sake of the neighborhood. I did not do it from any sense of justice at all. I did it to provide for myself an enjoyable and delectable spectacle."

She smiled faintly.

"That does rather let you out," she admitted. "However, on the whole I was disappointed. I am afraid that you are not so bad as people think."

"People," he repeated. "Francis Ledham, for instance—my son-in-law in power?"

"Francis Ledham is one of those few rather brilliant persons who have contrived to keep sane without becoming a pauper," she remarked.

"You know why?" he reminded her. "Francis Ledham has been a tremendous worker. It is work which keeps a man sane. Brilliance without the capacity for work drives people to the madhouse."

"Where we are all going, I suppose," she sighed.

"Not you," he answered. "You have just enough—I don't know what we moderns call it—soul, shall I say?—to keep you from the muddy ways."

She rose to her feet and leaned over the radio. Sir Timothy watched her thoughtfully. Her figure, notwithstanding its suggestions of delicate maturity, was still as slim as a young girl's. She was looking across the fire-tops towards an angry bank of clouds—long, pencil-like streaks of black in a purple background. Below, in the streets, a fast pass with grinding of brakes and noisy horns. The rail against which she leaned looked very dimly. Sir Timothy stretched out his hand and held her arm.

"My nerves are going with my old age," he apologized. "That supports seems too fragile."

She did not move. The touch of his fingers grew braver.

"We have entered upon an allegory," she murmured. "You are preserving me from the depths."

He laughed harshly.

"I!" he exclaimed, with a sudden touch of real and fierce bitterness which brought the light dancing into her eyes and a spot of color to her cheeks. "I preserve you! Why, you can never hear my name without thinking of sin, of crime of some sort! Do you seriously expect me to ever preserve anyone from anything?"

"You haven't made any very violent attempts to corrupt me," she reminded him.

"Women don't enter much into my scheme of life," he declared. "They played a great part once. It was a woman, I think, who first headed me off from the pastures of virtue."

"I know," she said softly. "It was Margaret's mother."

His voice rang out like a pistol-shot. "How did you know that?"

She turned away from the rail and threw herself back in her chair. His hand, however, she still kept in hers.

"Uncle Joe was initiated at Rio, you know, the year it all happened," she explained. "He told us the story years ago—how you came back from Europe and found things were not just as they should be between Margaret's mother and your partner, and how you killed your partner."

His brows quivered a little. One felt that the fire of suffering had touched him again for a moment.

"Yes, I killed him," he admitted. "That is part of my creed. The man who defiled their honor in the law courts are men I know nothing of."

"I am not sure," she said, "that you have not tonight dispelled an illustration."

"What instance of one?" he asked.

"Above all things," she went on, "I have always looked upon you as wicked. Most people do. I think that is the reason why so many of the women find you attractive. I suppose it is why I have found you attractive."

"Dear Lady Cynthia," he murmured, "don't tell me that I am going to slip back in your estimation into some normal place."

"I am not quite sure," he said deliberately. "I have always looked upon you as a kind of amateur criminal, a man who loved little things and dined well. You know how weary one gets of the ordinary code of morals in these days. You were such a delightful antidote. And now, I am not sure that you have not shaken my faith in you."

"In what way?"

"You really seem to have been engaged tonight in a very sporting and philanthropic enterprise. I imagined you visiting some den of vice and mixing in an equal with these terrible people who never seem to cross the bridges. I was perfectly thrilled when I put on your chauffeur's coat and hat and followed you."

"The story of my little adventure is a simple one," Sir Timothy said. "I do not think it greatly affects my character. I believe, as a matter of fact, that I am just as wicked as you would have me be, but I have friends in every walk of life, and, you know, I like to peer into the unexpected places. I had heard of this man Billy the Taxman. He beats women, and has established a perfect reign of terror where he lives. I fear I must agree with you that there were some elements of morality—of conforming, at any rate, to the recognized standards of justice—in what I did. You know, of course, that I am a great patron of every form of boxing, fencing and the various arts of self-defense and attack. I just took along one of the men from the symposium who I know was equal to the job. To give it a lesson."

"So did it all right," Lady Cynthia demanded.

"But this is where I think I re-examined myself," Sir Timothy examined the peculiar nature of his smile reassessing itself. "I did not do this for the sake of the neighborhood. I did not do it from any sense of justice at all. I did it to provide for myself an enjoyable and delectable spectacle."

She smiled faintly.

"That does rather let you out," she admitted. "However, on the whole I was disappointed. I am afraid that you are not so bad as people think."

"People," he repeated. "Francis Ledham, for instance—my son-in-law in power?"

"Francis Ledham is one of those few rather brilliant persons who have contrived to keep sane without becoming a pauper," she remarked.

"You know why?" he reminded her. "Francis Ledham has been a tremendous worker. It is work which keeps a man sane. Brilliance without the capacity for work drives people to the madhouse."

"Where we are all going, I suppose," she sighed.

"Not you," he answered. "You have just enough—I don't know what we moderns call it—soul, shall I say?—to keep you from the muddy ways."

She rose to her feet and leaned over the radio. Sir Timothy watched her thoughtfully. Her figure, notwithstanding its suggestions of delicate maturity, was still as slim as a young girl's. She was looking across the fire-tops towards an angry bank of clouds—long, pencil-like streaks of black in a purple background. Below, in the streets, a fast pass with grinding of brakes and noisy horns. The rail against which she leaned looked very dimly. Sir Timothy stretched out his hand and held her arm.

"My nerves are going with my old age," he apologized. "That supports seems too fragile."

She did not move. The touch of his fingers grew braver.

did just now—you kissed me rather well—and then ask me to marry you? It isn't your role. You must light a cigarette now, pat the back of my hand, and swagger off to another of your haunts of vice."

"In other words, I am not to propose?" Sir Timothy said slowly.

"You see how decent I am," she sighed. "I want to toy with my pleasures. Besides, there's that stamp or a brother of mine coming up to have a drink—I saw him get out of a taxi—and you couldn't get it through in time, not with dignity."

The rattle of the lift as it stopped was plainly audible. He stopped and kissed her fingers.

"I fear some day," he murmured, "it shall be a great disappointment to you."

CHAPTER XVI

Ledham and Margaret were agreeably surprised the next day at noon when they had arranged a luncheon for two at the Edie, to have lady Cynthia and Sir Timothy show up and join them.

Francis hurried off to give the necessary orders to enlarge his table, a page-boy touched him on the arm.

"If you please, sir," he announced.

"I?" Francis exclaimed. "Some mistake, I should think. Nobody knows that I am here."

"Mr. Ledham," the boy said. "This way, sir."

Francis walked down the vestibule to the row of telephone boxes at the further end. The attendant who was standing outside indicated one of them and motioned the boy to go away. Francis stepped inside. The man followed, closing the door behind him.

"I am asking your pardon, sir, for taking a great liberty," he confessed.

"No one wants you on the telephone,"

the man was evidently agitated.

Francis looked at him in surprise.

"I will come and dine with us!"

Sir Timothy hesitated. An issue which had been looming in his mind for many hours seemed to be suddenly joined.

"Please!" Lady Cynthia begged.

Sir Timothy followed the example of the others and rose to his feet.

He avoided Lady Cynthia's eyes.

He seemed suddenly a little tired.

"I will come and dine," he asserted quietly.

"I am afraid that I cannot promise more than that. Lady Cynthia, as she knows, is always welcome at the Sanctuary."

has been coming on for a long time. I suspected it the first time I ever met him. Now I am absolutely certain."

"It's quite a new idea," Margaret remarked. "Shall we like her in the family, Francis?"

"No airs," Lady Cynthia warned her.

"You two are not properly engaged yet. It may devolve upon me to give my consent."

"In that case," Francis replied. "I hope that we may at least count upon your influence with Sir Timothy."

"If you'll return the compliment and urge my suit with him," Lady Cynthia laughed.

"I am afraid I can't quite make up my mind about me, and I am no nice. I haven't flirted nearly so much as people think, and my instincts are really quite domestic."

"My position," Sir Timothy remarked, as he made an unsuccessful attempt to possess himself of the bill which Francis had called for, "is becoming a little difficult."

"Not really difficult," Lady Cynthia objected.

"Because the real decision rests in your hands."

"Just listen to the woman!" Margaret exclaimed. "Do you realize, father, that Cynthia is making the most brazen advances to you? And I was going to ask her if she'd like to come back to the Sanctuary with us this evening!"

Lady Cynthia was suddenly eager.

Margaret glanced across at her father.

Sir Timothy seemed almost imperceptible to start a little.

"Margaret has carte blanche at the Sanctuary as regards her visitors," he said. "I am afraid that I shall be over at the Walled House."

"But you'd come and dine with us?"

Sir Timothy hesitated. An issue which had been looming in his mind for many hours seemed to be suddenly joined.

"Please!" Lady Cynthia begged.

Sir Timothy followed the example of the others and rose to his feet.

He avoided Lady Cynthia's eyes.

Two-Piece Suit for Spring Wear

Tailored Outfit Scheduled to Enjoy Wide Vogue, Writer Says.

Early spring modeling will announce the mode for another season. Certain differences are, inevitable—indeed, the time is ripe for some radical departures from the current styles, says a fashion writer in the New York Tribune. This winter found a uniformity in dress among the Parisians which was reminiscent of the days of the past. Individuality, usually the rule at the time, which resorts was the exception and there was a startling conformity to certain types of dress and color. Inasmuch as the history of fashion shows that each of its phases ends in a too extended popularity, it would appear that the new mode will differ distinctly from that of the previous spring.

Some of these expected changes are clearly marked at the present moment. The tailored two-piece suit, for instance, is destined to enjoy a wide vogue. The return of this mode, no doubt many change in neckwear, which is always complimentary to the tailored costume.

Outstanding features of the neckwear for spring include convertible collars which may be spread out or turned over and held closely about the throat with a silk tie, the emphasizing of the V neckline and the use of two tailored silk or linen panels to simulate a waistcoat. Plain and novelty linens and white and pastel organdies are forecasted as the most favored materials.

From the modes at Palm Beach and the Riviera an accurate prediction may be made of the color tendencies for the approaching season. White will be appropriate for both formal frocks and sports wear. The general tone of the latter will be particularly vivid, with special emphasis placed upon bright variations of green and yellow. Jade greens and Chinese bluish-greens will sparkle in rivalry with the imperial yellow of the Mughals.

Informal Daytime Gowns.

For informal daytime wear, beige, brown and tan give evidence of a renewed popularity. These same colors will dominate the spring hostess, in addition, of course, to the nude hue which has attracted so much attention.

Just one more thing is certain. As far as the silhouette is concerned, the keynote of the new mode will be slim plumpness. And it will be stressed in the most complex way.

The dress with dual and occasional triple personality is the mode of the moment at Paris, and the principal French couturiers have avoided the usual mid-season quiet with numerous interpretations of this capricious and economical style. Each model instead of being a doublet gown for a single definite purpose, is suitable for two, or possibly three, widely different functions. Thus a dressy shortated with a wide belt.

The sleeve is the pivot on which the afternoon and evening dress swing into each other's position. When the sleeve is long there is little difficulty in effecting the transition, for the long

Woman From Hellertown, Pa., Says Paw Paw Was Just What She Needed

"For the past year I had lost 15 lbs. as strength and firmness of my body were nearly gone," says Miss Pearl E. Quill, 1743 Main St., Hellertown, Pa. "I lost weight, lost my appetite and became very weak and tired. I felt better and stronger. I feel sleep better than I did. The Paw Paw Tonic was just the thing I felt the need of." It is a bottle of all dried paw paws.

Sleeve requires no apology at an afternoon tea. Particularly interesting are the sleeves on this model, which is developed from white crepe with lace cravatons of gold metal cloth for these are indicative of an advanced interest in lace. Another effective combination for the same dress is that of black crepe and silver lace cravatons.

The Sleeveless Dress.

An opposite but equally versatile frock is the sleeveless afternoon dress, a model quite as acceptable for an informal dinner as for a formal afternoon tea. From Lanvin comes a dress of this type with a color ensemble which only she would dare. It is developed in pink crepe georgette over a foundation of silver cloth which in turn is appliqued and embroidered—and this in the Lanvin touch—it block. It is an ideal transition dress.

Lanvin displays her acetate lace for black as a medium for the borderland dresses. There is a series along the designs of this curtain suggestive of many things. It is:

The French stage always has been closely associated with the Paris mode, and this winter it is calling what has been the most prolific contributor to theatrical fashions. Lanvin is creating a distinct flavor in the plain clip role of "Charly," a characteristic French comedy.

In three acts she wears five different models, all designed by Galli. There is an elaborately embroidered velvet afternoon dress developed in hunter's green and turquoise blue and richly ornamented with metal. This is a simple chemise type with white panels falling from the shoulders at the back. Large embroidered ornaments decorate the front of the bodice and a similar design of embroidery covers the bands at the foot of the skirt.

Velvet and Bands of Fox.

Another of her costumes is the inevitable negligee, in this instance a charming diaphane of silver lace worn with a straight-cut pink sequin which in turn is trimmed with a deep band of sable fur.

For the denouement in the third act she wears an exceptionally smart three-piece suit of velvet which has its seven-eighth length cut in straight kimono style. Deep border bands of brown fox are an effective trimming.

None of these frocks has limited itself to its particular stage—all have been widely copied and their prototypes are frequently encountered on the boulevards.

Yvonne Printemps, the wife of Sacha Guitry, the dramatic author, has given considerable publicity to crepe de chine bed sheets by using them in the first act of "L'Amour Masque." This clever farce is soon to be brought to America and it is expected that the Lanvin two-yard wide pink crepe de chine sheets that are the "place de resistance" of the play will accompany the fair Yvonne.

Stylish Frock of Taffeta Still Holds the Place for Dance. This is a New Model With Six Flounces; a Type That Is Popular.

Stylish afternoon frock and a simple long-sleeved evening dress may become interchangeable. The one classified as an evening dress can be worn in the afternoon and the afternoon dress is appropriate for the evening.

Women who travel a great deal or who make frequent end trips from the Southwest to England have brought these dresses into fashion. The frocks are particularly popular in England where they are called "the blouse and skirt" and "the blouse and trousers."

When a woman is in a hurry to get dressed in the morning, she can put on a blouse and skirt and be off in a jiffy. The blouse is particularly good with the type of garment that is usually known as the blouse and trousers. She can place an extra blouse in her suitcase and interchange the blouse and trousers feature in an instant. They are in black silk which is soft and flowing sleeves and on one of the entries of the blouse and skirt. A narrow foundation of the blouse and skirt is a wide and wide lace.

Why We Predict A "Suit Season"

THE introduction of the O'Rosen or boyish type suit has created a sensation such as the World of Fashion has not seen in many and many a year. In New York, no less than nine stores claim the honor of having first to show it. Vogue and Harper's Bazaar are engaged in controversy as to which magazine it was that first sponsored this new style. Most important of all, the clever lines of the suit itself, its altogether charming matinée effect, have won for it a tremendous following in every fashion center of the world. All of which points to the fact that the tailored guy—in very new guise—is to enjoy a popularity this season that it hasn't known for many moons.

We sensed this trend of the times while in New York on our first Spring buying trip and made special effort to obtain for you exceptionally attractive suits to sell for exceptionally attractive prices. These suits are ready now in every material that fashion favors. You'll surely want to be among Connellsville's first to wear them! Hadn't you better drop in and try one on?

FIRE EXTINGUISHER MOST VALUABLE ADJUNCT TO WELL-ORDERED HOME, IN THAT IT MAY PREVENT LOSS OF LIFE

EVERY ONE MUST BE SAFEGUARDED

Prevention First Object; Means of Exit When Cut Off
Next Thought.

The planning, drafting, financing and construction of the new home are the natural courses to be taken into consideration before the venture. These having been accomplished there is still one other vitality important question.

"What if this—my new home—the realization of my fondest dreams—should catch fire tonight? What if it should occur while all are asleep and the crackling sound of burning timber tells the terrible story of wreck and ruin that will have been accomplished before the fire department can arrive?"

Suppose the fire starts when you, the man of the house, are not at home and your wife and children are left at the mercy of the flames? These are all questions that must occur to every house owner. While the fire department is rushing to your assistance there are several minutes in which you can do something. In this time, perhaps you could extinguish a small fire with your own hands, if equipped in the proper manner.

There are more burglars in homes than there are fires, yet it would be a discreditable proposition to find a home not safeguarded against the thief. People are but beginning to appreciate the necessity of installing quick-to-operate fire extinguishers in their homes. More than 15,000 lives are destroyed annually by fire, the cause of which is mostly carelessness and lack of preparedness. Each year in the United States 16,000 lives are lost, and 15,000 persons seriously injured by fire. Last year almost one-half billion of property was destroyed.

To a great extent these losses in lives and property could have been prevented if suitable fire-fighting apparatus had been close at hand.

Statistics show that 66 per cent of these fires occur in homes. The largest percentage of victims are women and children. It remains for those of us who are as yet untouched by the lesson that we have been taught, and so protect our homes and our loyal ones that we can go to sleep each night with a clear conscience and without dread.

The majority of fires can be extinguished in their incipiency if proper means are at hand. While one extinguisher should be provided for each home, yet it is not amiss to say that one should be provided for each floor in the home. The fire that can be checked more quickly when discovered, it will not develop into a dangerous conflagration. On the other hand, in case the fire has gained a dangerous headway, the extinguisher will provide, oftentimes, a means of exit that might otherwise be entirely cut off by the fire. Supposing the fire started and had gained you and your family upstairs? An extinguisher downstairs in that case would not do any good. Wherever one conveniently placed upstairs would make possible your fighting the flames back and your getting safely out of danger.

Certainly before many years this lesson will have been dimmed into us. Hunting Bargains If so, read our advertising columns.

Here's Few Secrets In Intensive Crops

Pay special attention to companion and follow crops. A companion crop is one that grows simultaneously with another. A follow crop is, as its name indicates, something to follow and use the same soil after the first crop is harvested. Corn or cabbage would be a follow crop for radishes, early beans, lettuce or spinach.

Parsley or carrots sown with radish seed is a companion crop, the radishes germinating in succession and the radishes being pulled as they mature while the parsley or carrots, taking longer to germinate, will keep right on growing among the radishes and continue after they have been pulled.

Early cabbage plants set at intervals of 18 inches among rows of radishes or young onions to keep growing when the radishes and onions have been pulled give another example of the companion crop.

By tabulating follow and companion crops closely and accurately the ground is used to its full capacity and the greatest yield secured from the garden. Plan for all the soil can carry. Fertilize to make it carry a full burden of vegetables from frost to frost.

Rotation of crops is important. It is wise not to plant plants of the same botanical order in the same position in a year after year. Beans and peas should move across the garden and back from year to year. Members of the cabbage family should be shifted in their position.

vegetables exhaust certain elements in the soil in time and may also leave disease germs.

A convenient way of securing this rotation is to draw a plan which you can reverse. When you plant it from left to right this year, next season turn it around and plant the same plan from right to left. In this way the shift will be made with the exception of the central rows. After you have worked this for a season or two, a new plan can be drawn to give more diversity of planting to the central subjects.

THE PASSING OF THE BRASS BED

The brass bed has served its day according to furniture dealers all over the country. No one seems to want it any more in its natural finish. The only way the public will accept it is when it is lacquered to look like some wood, such as walnut or mahogany. There are probably several reasons for this. In the first place the wood looks and themselves more readily to the decorative scheme of the bedroom. The popular demand is for complete beds a suites of some wood, and for the sake of economy many manufacturers make the brass bed and lacquer it to look like wood. It has the appearance of a solid wood bed, but it is not so expensive.

In the second place a brass bed is hard to keep clean and shiny, and every finger mark will mar the appearance. Wood finishes can be easily maintained in order the same polished care of and the modern housewife is watching for household furniture and back from year to year. Members of the cabbage family should be shifted in their position. So also should each of these patronize those who advertise.

FINISHING FLOOR VERY IMPORTANT FEATURE IN MODERN HOME BUILDING

A Few Practical Hints for Keeping It in Perfect Condition.

The finishing of an oak floor is a most important feature, involving cost, color and finish desired. Persuaded taste and artistic or decorative effects wished are the guides for the floor finisher.

Treatment: Treat the floor with a paste filler of desired tone, to fill up the pores and crevices. To thin the filler for application, one has a choice of using turpentine, benzine, wood alcohol or gasoline to get the right consistency. Never use a liquid rub-off with excelsior or cloth, rubbing against the grain of the wood. This will make a perfectly smooth and level surface. It keeps out dirt and forms a good foundation, which is the key-note of successful floors. Allow the filler twelve hours to set or dry. Then apply two coats of white shellac before applying the wax treatment. When varnish is to be used, give one coat of filler and one or two coats of varnish.

Either a wax or varnish finish may be used. The wax finish is preferred by many, due to economy and ease of renewing places that show wear. Renewing may be easily applied by housekeeper or servant.

WAX FINISH: The best method of applying the wax is to take cheese-cloth and double it to get added thickness; then fold into a sort of bag. Put a handful of floor wax inside and go over the surface thoroughly. It will be found that the wax works through the meshes of the cheesecloth and gives an even coating over the floor. This prevents waste and excessive wax in spots. After the floor has been gone over with the wax and allowed to dry about twenty minutes, it is ready for polishing. Rub in a polish with a weighted floor brush, first across the grain of the wood, then with it. A clean, soft cloth may be used in place of the brush if desired; then a piece of woolen felt or carpet should be placed under the brush to give the finishing gloss. After waiting an hour, a second coat of wax should be applied in the same way and rubbed to a polish.

VARNISH FINISH: This is usually more expensive than the wax finish, but it gives a very hard surface, which at the same time is elastic. One or two coats should be applied after the application of the paste filler. Any of the standard hardwood flooring varishes will give good results.

To a lover of wood nothing could be more beautiful than an oak floor; it satisfies all the demands as regards permanency, wearing qualities and beauty. It lends a sense of harmony to the home floor and makes the floor itself a distinct element in the decorative scheme of the home.

A wood, or less noticeable grain tends in some cases to become monotonous owing to its absence of pattern and variation in tone.

By following the suggestions as outlined above, one is assured of very gratifying results.

ART POSSIBLE IN EVERY HOME IN CONNELLSVILLE

Thanks to Perfected Photography Reproduction Is Made Easy.

PICTURES BEST GUIDE

As civilization has advanced, so has art. Beauty, romance, adventure and history are by no means dependent for their existence on the knowledge of writing. As a matter of fact, history, to a large extent—at least so, ancient history—is expressed more by pictorial means than by writing. Writing in its earliest form was but the outgrowth of art. Early Egyptian characters are abstract—exclusively made up of pictorial symbols.

Nowdays we have writing for the recording of history, romance, adventure and beauty, but in practically every case the writing is accomplished or illustrated by pictures. The human mind seems capable of grasping fundamental ideas more quickly through the medium of pictures and of retaining these ideas longer than is the case with any other medium of expression. As we advance in civilization our ability to reproduce our impressions also grows. The savage appreciates art usually in its rudest form and—speaking of colors—in their crudest forms.

Sophisticates of color and form are appreciated by those who have had advantages in art training and environment. No two of us have exactly the same taste in regard to pictures, and it is for this reason that the wide selection of subjects made possible by modern methods of reproduction are especially valuable. Faithful reproductions of the finest of the world's masterpieces can be procured for very nominal sums.

The Art of Reproduction

Prior to the Renaissance there existed only the original paintings and etchings of the great masters. These were very costly and could only be afforded by the wealthier class. A little later (Fifteenth century) the painters universally formed a habit of working side by side with engravers. It was the function of these engravers to reproduce the work of the masters.

Engraving at that time, however, had not the significance that it has at present. It was not until the introduction of the photograph by Daguerre (1839) that the science of present-day photographic reproduction began to develop. And it was not until the art of painting became more protected that the art of engraving gained any practical appreciation.

Anyone who has had any experience with the camera man knows that the beam of light from the object which is being photographed passes through the lens of the camera and strikes a light sensitive plate at the back of the camera. A chemical action takes place on the plate as soon as the light strikes it, this action varying in intensity, depending on the degree of light which strikes the surface. While a number of developments were necessary before this principle could be applied to the making of faithful reproductions on paper of any of the masterpieces, yet fundamentally it merely involves the transference of the photographic image to metal.

The plate is then immersed in an acid solution which eats away the exposed portions of the plate, the result being a reproduction of the object photographed in reverse form. A close examination of such a plate will reveal that the picture is made up of a multitude of fine dots of varying sizes, the space between the dots and the size of the dots themselves determining the intensity of tone. The plate is ready for printing. If the picture that we are reproducing involves the primary colors—red, blue and yellow—it will be necessary to make three, probably four, separate plates, each registering separately one of the colors found in the original. One of these plates will usually be a so-called black plate.

When put on the press, these plates are run in a definite order, first one color of ink and then the next color until the final color and shade is run and our reproduction is complete. The above description refers in particular to Four Color Process Engraving. We have another process, known as Lithography. This, in turn, according to present printing processes, may be split up into Offset Process and Stone Lithography. A great many of the illustrations reproduced are nowadays printed by the offset process on paper or canvas similar in texture to that of the original production. To one not thoroughly posted on the intricacies of printing and engraving, some of these reproductions are so faithful that discussion often arises as to whether they are originals or reproductions.

DAVENPORT BED IN EVERY HOME WILL BE HELP WHEN UNEXPECTED GUEST COMES

Trend Toward the Practical and the Shortage of Housing Facilities Leads Many Families to Appreciate the Double Usefulness of the Davenport Bed.

MADE IN MANY STYLES—DAVENPORT, BED COMBINED

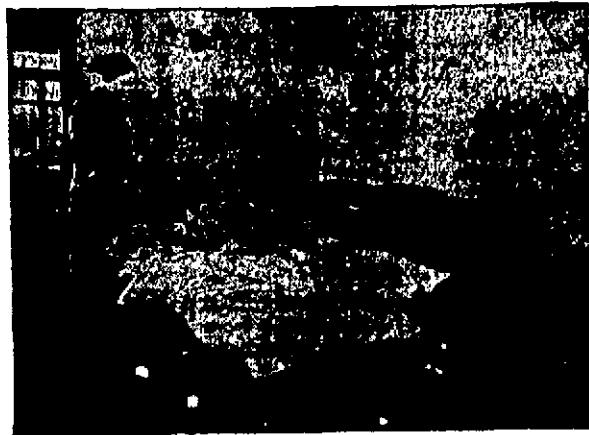

By W. E. COOK
Every one has had the experience of the unexpected guest. Nothing could be more reassuring than the knowledge that in the davenport lay the possibility of keeping the unexpected guest overnight. By day it lends itself in most charming manner to the scheme of the living room; by night it performs the humble function of bed. It serves in both capacities equally as well.

In homes of smaller size where insufficient bedrooms are available for all members of the family, the davenport-bed becomes probably the most important piece of furniture in the house. Owing to the tremendous popularity it has met with among all classes of people it has been very rapidly developed until now it stands almost unique in its expression of art in the home furnishing. Likewise, owing to its practical use it stands very high in the esteem of millions of people. Without adding another room to the house, the davenport-bed utilizes present space now available to better advantage. There is not another piece of furniture in the home that can be said to even approximate the amount of real service that is to be gotten from the davenport. So well have the manufacturers of this useful piece of furniture kept pace with the times that the davenport-bed is now procurable in period styles that will harmonize with the finest of furnishings. It has none of the earmarks of makeshift or combination. It represents the high-water mark of mechanical and artistic designs, and a happy combination of both.

One simple operation, and presto, we have a bed ready for the night; morning comes and with as little effort the bed can be again converted into a davenport for the day with all evidence of the room having been used as a bedroom gone.

Style to Suite. Every thought of utility has made necessary ample proportions in its design, the davenport has been constructed to meet the minute requirements for perfect comfort. The davenport-bed, even though it meets a great many different tastes in furnishings, is unquestionably admitted by all to be a long-felt need. It may be secured in such period styles as Queen Anne, The Brothers Adam, Renaissance, Early English, Louis XVI, Chippendale, William and Mary, Georgian, Hepplewhite, Sheraton, Colonial, Tudor, Pompeian. In fact the whole list of periods which represent the accomplishments of great artists.

The Davenport at Night

Scene Taken from "The Great Idea"

Probably one of the reasons why this piece of furniture has met with such instant approval of the housewife is that it is mechanically simple. There is nothing to get out of order or to break. Perfect balance is provided for so that very little energy is expended in either opening or closing the davenport. It is of such design that it is not necessary to remove the bedding before closing the davenport as this is inclosed in a sanitary dustproof chamber when the davenport-bed is closed. This point is of especial value in homes where the davenport is used regularly as a bed. Time is so short before breakfast that the housewife would not have the opportunity of making it up. Simply by closing it she automatically makes the room presentable until such time as she can give the bedding proper attention.

Ventilating the Home Through the Kitchen

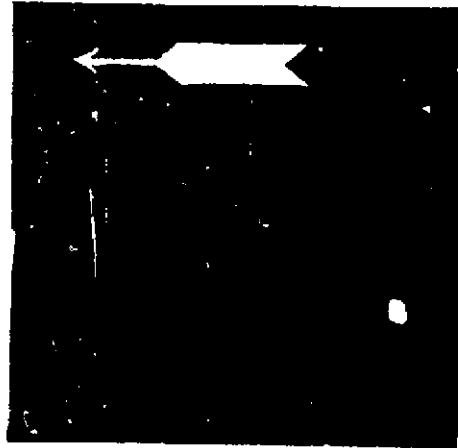

Expert Tells How to Prevent Odors Reaching Other Rooms.

By G. C. BREIDERT

Home ventilating is by no means a new thought. At least women have been worrying about this problem for some fifty thousand years more or less. Way back in the Stone Age the woman of the house must have found this one of her most serious problems. In spite of the otherwise comfortable quarters provided by the grotto in the valley of Lotro in France and thereabouts the Neanderthal man oftentimes nearly froze to death. The smoke from their domed hearth fires was too much for their eyes and lungs to bear, and the cave man and his family were forced to take refuge and to endure the discomforts and uncertainties of the weather outside their grotto to escape the bad ventilation of the otherwise comfortable cave.

With the coming of the first house—a structure of boughs covered with clay and mud—the ventilation was by no means improved. The fire was built in the center of the floor and as no outlet had been provided except through the low doorway the smoke soon filled with smoke and breathing became difficult. Even in the days of the Vikings the smoke rose to the rafters of the great hall gradually filling the room until someone had the wit to cut a hole in the center of the roof through which some of the smoke could escape. Oddly enough, this undoubtedly was the origin of the present-day chimney even though the chimney as we know it did not actually come into existence until the Twelfth century.

Ventilation Through the Kitchen

No Odors Can Reach the Other Rooms

Neither Greece nor Rome nor any of the older cultures of the past had done better than to make use of an open grating in the roof. Ventilation or rather the lack of it, like many things which we have become accustomed to has stubbornly resisted attempts to has stubbornly resisted at attempts toward betterment. At the present time however people are no longer satisfied to be rid of smoke alone. The chimney has proved a means for disposing of it. The odors of cooking and the carbon dioxide and monoxide are still present especially so in the case of gas and coal ranges. We desire most of all to be rid of the odors of cooking in the other rooms of the house. Of course the windows can be opened to let in fresh air but as a matter of fact they do not provide a good means of getting rid of the foul air. Frequently the raising of windows in the kitchen will seriously affect the fire if not actually blow it out.

The solution therefore for these problems seems not to be the providing of additional means of letting in fresh air but rather that of providing means for disposing of foul air.

Inasmuch as the kitchen seems to be the source of the many bad odors that are found in the home it is only logical to assume that the means for disposing of the foul air should be located in the kitchen.

Electrical exhaust fans now are a household convenience. Placed in the kitchen high up near the ceiling or in an upper part of the window or as in some cases exhausting directly into the chimney this fan provides a very efficient means of disposing of the smoke and foul air and the odors of cooking. Many dishes that are otherwise savory have fallen into popular disfavor, owing to the disagreeable odors when cooking. The kitchen ventilating fan sets up a current of air from and through the rooms of the house toward and through the kitchen thus preventing the spread of odors toward the other parts of the house just as effectively as would sealed doors between the kitchen and adjacent rooms. More so in fact because any odors in the balance of the house are sucked toward the kitchen no matter from what direction the wind may be blowing.

There is much more than merely the odor of cooking to be considered in the matter of kitchen ventilation. This alone is well worth the comparatively small cost of installing but it is a plus on the modern home building that with all its conveniences and comforts, its refinement and extravagances, it is still unable to protect itself against the odors of cauliflower, cabbage, sausages, etc. Many of us have come to feel that we can only enjoy these honest wholesome, delicious foods surprisingly, and when we are sure no guest will arrive.

All that is needed to make the enjoyment of such foods possible is merely an electric exhaust fan in the kitchen.

Better working conditions will be made possible for the cook owing to improved ventilation and because the kitchen is kept cool. This also insures the protection of the balance of the house from becoming overheated from the kitchen. In the next place real saving to decorations, hangings and furniture throughout the house in eliminating the fumes smoke and soot which invariably work their way from the cook stove throughout the house and gradually deposit a film of grease on everything on which of course dust settles and dirt clinging colors fabrics and wall papers.

Many tragic kitchen accidents can be recalled by every one of us—accidents that have taken their toll in other parts of the house by depositing

Choosing of Wall Paper

If more people realized the value of first impressions, walls would receive greater consideration, for they are part of a room one is most conscious of when entering.

Too long have they been considered as background merely, folds for the furniture and hangings—little more than a frame in fact. But even the most interesting picture is often made ineffective by a frame too neutral, one not of equal importance to the picture itself. And in the same manner a very beautiful interior, perhaps filled with rare old furniture and priceless objects of art, will often be surrounded by walls placidly lacking in any pictorial interest. They are not only uninteresting and dull in themselves, but totally out of key with the spirit of the room which needs some interest in the walls to supplement the more varied and vivid interest of the other furnishings.

The tendency in decoration for the past few years has been towards plain, undecorated surfaces. One reviled in paneled walls, plain rugs and furniture done in velvets and moths devoid of any striking design. Often figured hangings provided the only interest. It was a lazy form of decoration—people finding it easier to plan a room with plain colors than to struggle with the problem of design, as well as color. Slowly but surely a reaction has set in. The revival of the William Morris papers, the wide use of mural painting and the constant demand for figured rugs all point to an interest in sheer design. People want the shock of some compelling pattern either in the walls or in the hangings. They are no longer content to give up blank spaces. They realize that the frame of a room should be quite as distinctive as the furnishings and are demanding decorated walls. This all accounts for the widespread and growing interest in wall paper. American manufacturers are resurrecting old and charming designs and reproducing them with such skill and fidelity that it is impossible to distinguish them from the originals. Artists are constantly designing new and original patterns with the result that there are on the market today papers to suit practically every type of house and every form of decoration.

The great interest in everything early American has brought to light all kinds of interesting papers. Nothing could be more delightful than a Colonial hall done in grey-green landscape paper—one that suggests vistas and distances with a design not too insistent to prevent its being just the right background for the paint colored prints so characteristic of the time and so effective in halls. If the space be narrowed a paper of this kind is an excellent choice for it serves to push out the walls, besides adding great pictorial quality to an interior too often dull and lacking in any arresting interest. For a larger room or a hall there are delicate striped papers particularly lovely in two shades of cream or pale yellow against which mellowed old mahogany looks its very best. With both these papers one may use either plain or figured rug and with the landscape paper I would suggest curtains of a silk, the tone one finds in old spring prints.

There is a certain type of living room that demands the formality of cool paneled walls. A Georgian interior filled with fragile Eighteenth century furniture has a certain stiffness and dignity about it that makes evenly paneled wall spaces a necessity if one is to preserve the true spirit of such an interior. But many types of living rooms both formal and informal require quite a different wall paper and still keep the paneled effect. Decorative papers, Chinese design are charming set with panels but the whole antique is used in connection with Eighteenth century mahogany furniture. Chippendale used this treatment with striking effect.

The one thing to be remembered when using this gayly figured paper, either entirely or only in panels, is to keep the hangings and rugs more or less simple in design. This does not mean they must be absolutely plain, nor nothing is more charming than fine striped paper, provided they pick up one or more of the colors of the pattern on the walls. In this case it is advisable to use a plain fabric on the furniture as the walls provide all the necessary design. In addition to the sheer decorative quality one can also increase the apparent size of a room by using paper having a design of open spaces—a shadow landscape for instance, with long vistas down which the eye likes to travel. In the same manner height can be added to a low-ceilinged room by a narrow striped paper which combines so well with practically any form of decoration and is not too insistent in design to be an excellent back-ground for paintings, etchings or colored prints.

In all the history of art and architecture walls have been used as a medium of decoration. From the pictured temple walls of Egypt through the frescoes of Greece and Rome and the tapestries of the Middle Ages, there runs a thread of decorative beauty which today finds its most artistic expression in wall paper. In every important period of interior decoration since the Sixteenth century wall paper has been an essential element.

New, Attractive Designs in SPRING WALL PAPERS

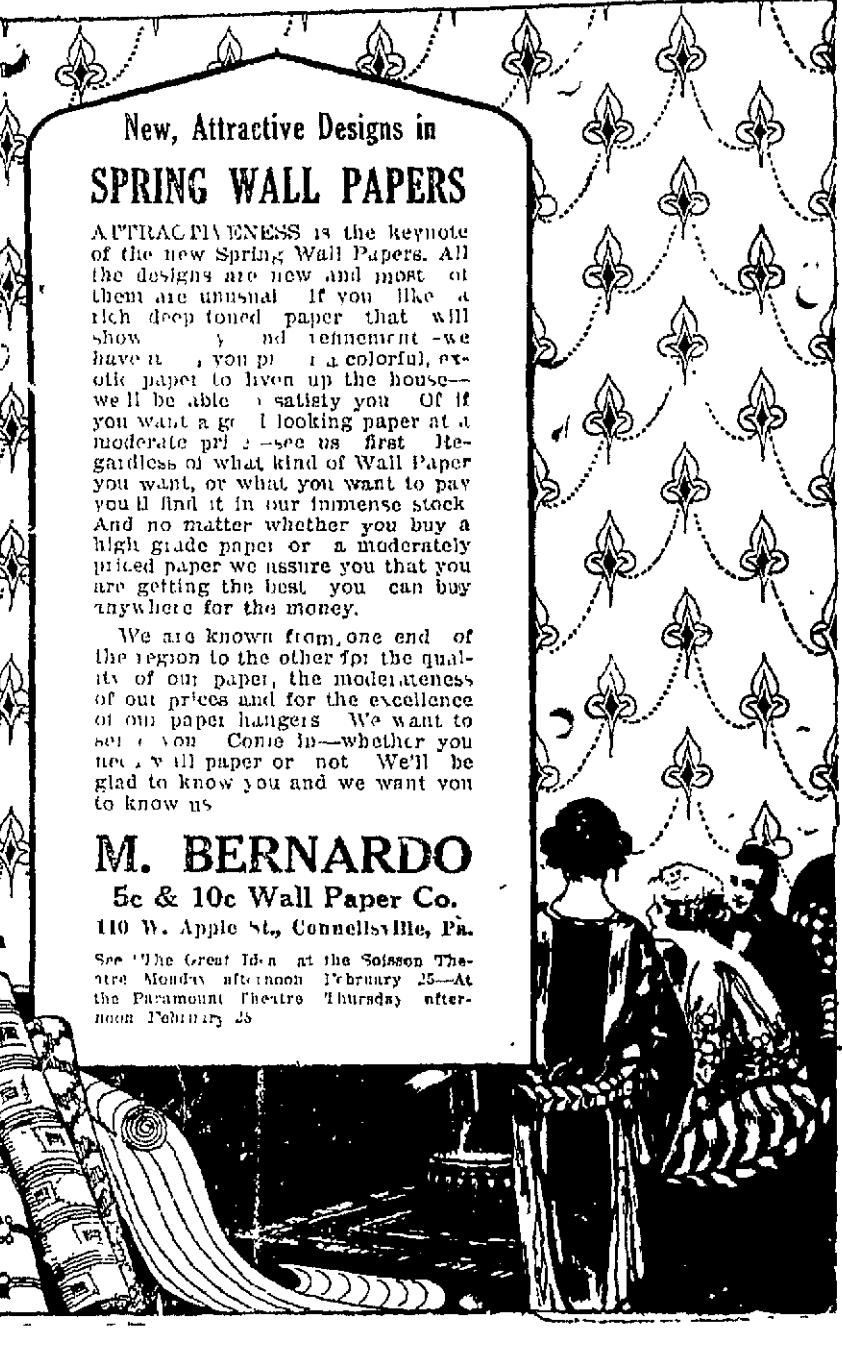

A PTRACTIVENESS is the keynote of the new Spring Wall Papers. All the designs are new and most of them are unusual. If you like a rich deep toned paper that will show off your pictures and furniture—we have it. You will find a colorful, exotic paper to liven up the house—we'll be able to satisfy you. If you want a good looking paper at a moderate price—see us first. Regardless of what kind of Wall Paper you want, or what you want to pay you'll find it in our immense stock. And no matter whether you buy a high grade paper or a moderately priced paper we assure you that you are getting the best you can buy anywhere for the money.

We are known from one end of the region to the other for the quality of our paper, the moderateness of our prices and for the excellence of our paper hangers. We want to see you. Come in—whether you need wall paper or not. We'll be glad to know you and we want you to know us.

HOUSEKEEPING AS A BUSINESS IS MODERN IDEA

The home is, or should be, a paying proposition. To a large degree this depends however, upon the arrangement of the house and the labor and time-saving devices found in it.

Considering that the housewife spends over 75 per cent of her time in the kitchen, for our purpose we are "considering the kitchen as the center of the home." In reply to a query offered for the best answer as to why women buy and desire such as washing machines, vacuum cleaners, electric dishwashers, and other appliances, the consensus of opinion indicates that women want such devices not only because of the labor saving involved, but because of the time saving that is permitted.

This leaves the housewife with more time to devote to her personal welfare and the pursuit of social enjoyment, study, club, politics, recreation etc.

Numerous experiments have proven that many housewives walk a total of one hundred miles a year while doing their housework. The dimensions and arrangement of the kitchen therefore play a very important part in the distance traveled.

Considering all these things it is advisable to have in the majority of cases the kitchen small, "in your own shadow."

rather than large, and oblong rather than square. Every kitchen should be a complete working unit within itself.

The kitchen should be so arranged that following the meal the steps taken up to the time the dishes are again stored away for another meal, be in a progressive direction. That is, from table to work table, or counter for soiled dishes, to sink, to drain-board, to china closet. Usually a routing of this kind going from left to right is preferable to the reverse direction. The china closet should be situated conveniently both to the sink and the dining room.

Cupboards are, nowadays, placed in the kitchen itself as close as possible, considering arrangement to the work table. Frequently the work table forms a shelf underneath the china closet with the cupboard built into the wall. The old-fashioned pantry which separated the kitchen from the dining room should be eliminated as it causes an unnecessary number of steps. The space that has been devoted to pantries can be more profitably used for the addition of other rooms to your house.

The main idea behind efficiency is to group your tools and working paraphernalia about your chief point of activity. This naturally means that each utensil or device should be located that it is quickly available at the place where it is most frequently used. The sink should be so located that during the day it receives plenty of daylight and at night gives plenty of artificial illumination without working in your own shadow.

No matter where or how you live you are paying rent. If not to the landlord—then to yourself. The point is which pays best—rent on someone's else house or your own. You probably have been pondering much on just such questions. If you do not want the burden and responsibility of caring for a house or if this responsibility for you is heavier than that of providing the rent, then for you, renting probably is cheaper.

Taxes, insurance, depreciation, upkeep and many more such items must be covered by the rental, but, in addition you must pay the landlord an ample return on his investment. Remember it is a business investment and he is entitled to a margin of profit. This varies as to locality but is rarely less than eight per cent and frequently, as government statistics tell us, as high as 13 per cent. Such a rate is necessary to protect the landlord's investment and give him due profit.

The amount of money spent yearly for the privilege of having shelter over our heads is amazing especially when we remember that not one dollar of it constitutes an investment toward ownership.

Periodically all others have qualms of doubt as to whether the same amount of money vested in a home would not prove a better investment. Perhaps you are fully satisfied that home ownership is the ideal state, but hesitate to take the leap because of lack of definite information as to financial obligations. You wish to know whether you would be tying yourself to an obligation heavier than your ability to carry.

Home Building an Investment
It is altogether wrong to assume that the financing of a new home constitutes the signaling of your name or eternal indebtedness. No matter on what basis you pay for your home the fact remains that you get not only what your renting neighbor gets—a receipt—but in addition, a tangible physical something that belongs to you for evermore—A Home of Your Own.

Moral Effect of Owning a Home
Quite aside from the sense of joy that one gets from owning or paying for a home, there is the moral effect that must be considered.

Many a family, which otherwise would have gone from year to year accumulating nothing in the bank account, have been saved from certain ruin by the systematic saving habits made necessary by the circumstance of paying for a home. Without an obligation of some such nature very few people are inclined to the extent of saving a definite amount each month. It is perfectly easy to start a savings account with the honest intention of depositing a certain amount periodically, but circumstances cause you to alter your habits and the first thing you know you have forgotten your fine resolution.

It is a mistake to assume that home building requires a lot of money to begin with. Many homes all around us have been built and paid for with comparatively small initial outlay.

The proper way to look on home ownership is that it is an enterprise—a business if you please. It is a plan for investing your money in your own enterprise for safe and secure returns. But like all business it must be approached with good judgment and understanding, followed up with good management.

Building for Satisfaction or Profit?
Probably the most important consideration is profit when building a home. The joy, the happiness, the contentment, the sense of security, the pride, and a host of other considerations depending upon home ownership often entirely outweigh the profit idea. Your home expresses your individuality. Your flowers, garden, book shelves, fireplace, decorating—all these and many more are expressions of your personality and taste. There are many cases where individuals are engaged in commercial ventures from which they receive a large percentage for money invested. Sometimes this percentage is so large that home ownership, by comparison, has no financial inducement, and in such case it may be cheaper to rent than to build. Because of the fact that one ownership has more to it than the mere financial side, even those who can make more money by renting are usually home owners.

Thinking in mind that home building is a business investment proposition plus a matter of sentiment—that it is a profit-sharing plan in which you put yourself dividends, and that on the other hand renting for the landlord is also a business, and must pay him dividends...you have but one consideration—it is simply a case of whom you wish to pay dividends—the landlord or yourself. And also a case of whom you wish to live in a house or a home.

Two or Three Plantings Will Assure the Industrious Cottage Gardener a Continuous Supply of Beans, One of the Most Welcome Treats That Come From the Home Garden.

Back Yard Garden and Its Problems

Soil, Seeds, Sunshine, Moisture and Brains Among Essentials.

Records kept through a period of several years by about 300 cottage gardeners indicated or proved rather, that a well-cultivated vegetable gardener paid them at the rate of about $5 cents an hour for their labor and on an acreage basis the returns at market prices were about $850 an acre. Not all the land so yielded at this rate, rises to, than half that amount but a considerable number gave higher rates so that the average for those recorded was about $35 from a tenth acre garden.

Results like the above are seldom obtained in general farming or truck growing, and come only from intensive cultivation. Of all the land under cultivation, however, the cottage or home garden should be landed the most in heavily and large seeds secured according to the garden experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, there are a few very important points in the management of a successful parson's home garden.

The ingredients, soil, seeds, sunshine, water and rains, must be carefully and painstakingly blended in order to make the garden pay the owner dividends. Without each one of the ingredients the mixture will fail and be recorded among the list of failures, but with all the harmonies blended and backed by a reasonable amount of work, the results are nine cases out of ten most satisfactory. The soil may be anything from rocky to the sandy or silt loam or a mixture of all of them. Any soil that is not too hopeless may be made to produce. If enough manure, fertilizer, lime, wood ashes and labor are expended upon it, usually it is the lot of the cottage gardener to take what fate in the way of soil and location has allotted to him and then make the best of it. Manure and wood ashes are hard to obtain, but commercial fertilizers and lime can be had in abundance. The labor he can supply himself and credit it to much-needed exercise if he feels so inclined. Dead woods, leaves, street sweepings where they do not contain oil also refuse from the kitchen may be worked into the soil to add organic matter.

Good seeds are just as essential as good soil. Why go to all the trouble of getting the soil in condition if something worth while is not planted upon it? Where can good seeds be procured? Almost anywhere of well-established seed dealers, but there is a great difference in seeds and it pays to get the best even though the cost is a little higher. If the garden is to pay dividends the crops must be planted at the proper time and seeds should be ordered early and be on hand when wanted for planting.

Should Profit by His Own Mistakes

Careful Gardener Can Easily Obviate Errors of Past Season.

There is small hope for those who do not profit by their mistakes. Recently in a meeting of about 150 home gardeners, those present were asked to recount some of the mistakes that they made in the conduct of their gardens last season. Here are some of them, gathered by the United States Department of Agriculture for the benefit of the readers of the Cottage Gardener column. The first of these gardeners to confess stated that the greatest mistake he made was in planting most of his crops too early and before the ground had become sufficiently warm as a result many of the seeds failed to grow and the garden had to be planted over again and was late in maturing. Another of the gardeners said that his greatest mistake was in not making several plantings of certain crops such as beans, corn, beets, lettuce, spinach, etc. His mistake was in making but one planting of each, then when the crops were gathered he had nothing more coming on. So save plantings of many of the garden crops may well

Poor preparation of the soil is the mistake made last year by a large number of the gardeners who attended the experience meeting. Persons who have not had a farm or market garden training often appreciate the need of thorough preparation of the soil before planting. Little the we do get a start was the major mistake of another group of the gardeners. This is in the soil. In which the seeds are put in the soil will be one that I am established. One gardener said that his greatest mistake was in allowing the bugs to get ahead of him and that his crops were reduced in yield as a result. Another gardener stated that he did not arrange his garden properly and that the taller crops shaded the low ones.

One planting of beans in the home garden gives the family a taste—two plantings give them a fair supply and three plantings will provide plenty for the greater part of the summer. Several hundred varieties of lettuces are included in our American seed trade catalogues but two or three varieties will give sufficient range for family use says the United States Department of Agriculture. Head lettuce, Boston lettuce, and leaf lettuce are the best.

MISSOURI SCENE OF GREAT QUAKE

Earth Tremor in 1812 Caused Mississippi to Run Backward.

Recent reports from various points in the Mississippi valley tellings of slight earthquake shocks are unusual; but they seem extraordinary, like extremes of temperature and other out-of-the-way weather phenomena, only because man's memory is short, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"One of the world's greatest earth quakes and certainly the most severe in America since the days of Columbus occurred in the heart of the Mississippi valley in 1811 and 1812," continues the bulletin. "Fortunately there were few towns and no bridges and dams and railroads to be destroyed in those days, but the pioneers had just begun the Westward push that was quickly to spread population and development all the way to the Pacific."

Destruction in Settlements

"The center of the disturbances was almost exactly in the bed of the Mississippi river about 50 miles south of the north of the Ohio. The little town of Cartherville, in what is now the southeast corner of Missouri, lay where the quakes were greatest. It was totally destroyed though its inhabitants escaped both falling timbers and river waves and found refuge on a nearby hill. New Madrid on the river a few miles to the north suffered almost as much."

"This region has practically no hard rock, but consists of beds of clay and sand several thousand feet deep. It is in such formations that earthquakes cause greatest damage since the relatively loose ground is easily moved, great earth blows roll, and cracks form."

Made River Run Backward.
"The bed of the Mississippi, which has lain as quiet as the knowledge of the past two generations, was momentarily obstructed near New Madrid. The waters flowed violently upstream and sloshed from side to side, destroying numerous boats at that river port. Great fissures opened in the surrounding country and jets of sand spouted out as they did in an other illustrious American earthquake at Charleston, S. C. 75 years later. Seismographs did not exist in those days, but the tremors of the great Mississippi valley earthquake were actually felt as far north as the Canadian border and as far south as New Orleans. A hundred miles to the east boundaries were shaken from mountain to lake."

Created Numerous Lakes

"The earthquake of 1811-12 is not merely a dim memory. It left its marks deep in the countryside. Red foot long 11 miles long, and four or five wide in the northeast corner of Tennessee was its greatest geographic effect. A locally forested section sank to form this new body of water and the great swamp of thousand acres of trees protruding from parts of the lake still stand to this day. The land around the lake retains the form of the huge hollow into which it was born and which became especially when the section is viewed from the air.

Numerous smaller lakes were formed by the earthquake west of the Mississippi in what is now Missouri and Arkansas. A brief geological examination will disclose traces of deep fissures that were opened up in 1811 and which time weather and vegetation have not been able to hide."

America Leads in Home Comforts

THE average American home has more comforts and conveniences than the places of Europe. Home for home, the American household has a well-kept look, an atmosphere of prosperity and contentment you cannot find in the homes of any other country in the world. In foreign lands, the modernized dwelling, as we know it, is found only in limited numbers and then only in the larger cities.

In America, even in remote rural districts, you find pianos, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, up-to-date heating systems, telephones and numberless appliances that go far to make life easier, happier and more worth while. You may not realize it, but America's high standard of home life is due largely to advertising. For the development of advertising is distinctively American. It has taken its place as a leading force in bringing together the interests and wants of a great, united people. And a large share of the credit for this development is due the newspapers.

Stop and think how many of the appliances you use, the foods you eat, the clothes you wear, and other articles entering into your every-day life, were popularized by newspaper advertising.

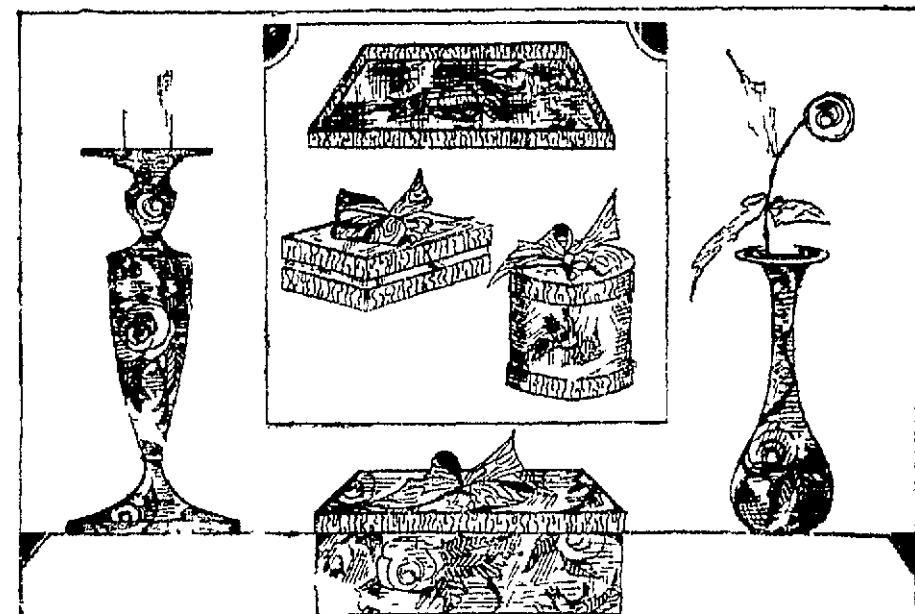

Then you will realize what a vital part advertising has played and is playing in your daily life.

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS THEY MEAN A LOT TO YOU.

HELP FOR THE MAN WHO WANTS TO BUILD

SOME FINANCING ADVICE TO HELP HOME BUILDERS

Most agents who loan money for home building are entrusted with the responsibility of investing other people's money. They must be careful. They usually investigate the character and reputation of those who ask for loans. A person whose record is good, who has a reputation for meeting obligations promptly, frequently gets a larger loan.

Things That Influence

Other factors influence the amount of money you can borrow. For example, the lot you select, the house you propose to build, the available cash you have on hand will go a long way in determining how much money you can borrow.

If the cost of your proposed house is either too high or too low in proportion to the cost of your lot, your proposal may be considered too great a risk.

You will see, therefore, that you must be extremely careful in selecting the type, size and kind of house you want to build. Its cost must be in due proportion to the value of the lot on which you propose to build.

When you estimate your financing, don't overlook the charge for taxes, insurance, interest on the cash you have on hand, interest on the money you borrow, wear and tear on your property. These items must be included in the cost of your house if you want to determine a fair and accurate percentage of return for the dollars you invest.

No Diagrams to Borrow

If you decide to finance your home on the mortgaged plan, don't get the notion that the house is not yours. It is. If you need to borrow money for home building purposes, don't get the idea that "borrowing money is a disgrace." It is not. A large proportion of all the homes built in this country are built with borrowed money.

Keep in mind that the agency from which you borrow money considers it a home building problem from an investment point of view. You also should do so.

In the last analysis home financing involves itself into an investment proposition, and adequate protection for that investment to both the people who loan money and those whose money is loaned.

Some Financing Advice

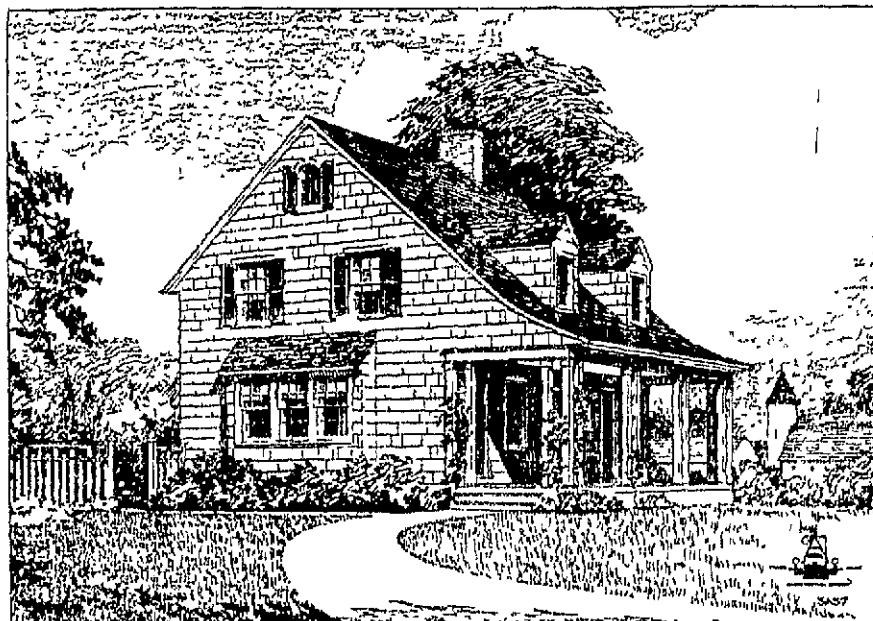

If there is one bit of advice that people should heed in anticipation of borrowing money for building, it is as follows:

Don't trust to hunches—don't take speculative judgment. Get the names and stories of those who make homes, planning, building and financing a business. It will save you money in the end.

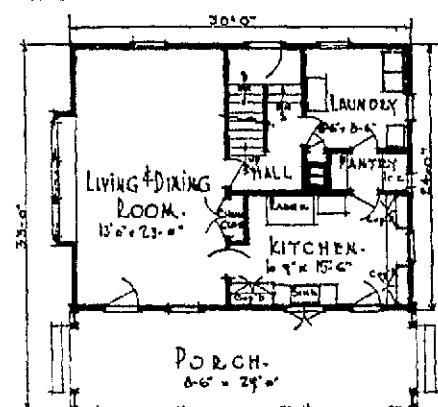

Money is a commodity, and like building materials—lumber, bricks, cement and equipment, must be paid for if you use or borrow it. Your proportion then is to obtain money at the lowest possible price.

How much money can you borrow? Who can tell? The question of how much a house builder can borrow is answered best in advance of the builder's operation. Those questions will be discussed in the next and following articles to appear in this column.

WHAT YOU MAY WANT TO KNOW ABOUT BUILDING

Questions addressed to the paper may be answered by the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., controlled by the American Institute of Architects and the National Association of Home Builders, Washington, D. C. Address stamped envelope, self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Q.—We wish to have laundry on our kitchen floor but the floor area is not large enough. Is it necessary to lay down floor mats or put down the linoleum?

A.—It is a wash floor in rough in quantities will show through the linoleum. If it is very bad you will have to lay it. Often old floors can be dressed off to make a suitable base for linoleum. Lay a heavy coat of it before the final tiling.

Q.—How far apart should lathe be laid? If there danger of getting them too close together or too far apart?

A.—Lathe are too close together the plaster keys cannot be formed if they are too far apart. Plaster is watered. One-fourth inch is the minimum on the 8' x 10' wall and the outside is the minimum on the eaves height.

Q.—How high should the ceilings be for an ordinary Colonial house?

A.—In southern states first story ceilings should be 8' 6" high and second story 7' 6". Some cities require not more than 8 feet 6 inches in many cases. In the south ceilings may be a foot higher than this.

Q.—In estimating the expense for remodeling a house giving the exact sum for the job is not exact. It is necessary for me to know what the cost will be before the work is started. Am I reasonable in requiring it?

A.—It is very difficult to anticipate what final cost will be in any remodeling job. You must work along the lines of the old building. In this case upon your contractor giving you a total cost before he starts, he will include that price high enough to protect himself. Perhaps you can get him to guarantee a maximum sum with the understanding that you will pay the actual cost plus a percentage of the whole cost not to exceed the guaranteed sum.

Q.—Do you think building material will be less expensive in a year or so, and if they will come down would it be wise to put off building until then?

A.—Economists and experts have agreed that there will be decreases in some lines and increases in others so that the general cost of living will differ from what it is at present, but this is conjecture. You probably can save money by starting your building operations now, putting in the foundations, rough framing and roof and letting the building stand in this form until spring comes. This also is a gamble.

Q.—Is it necessary to plaster the ceiling of a basement? We thought we could save some money by not doing so?

A.—It is not necessary to plaster so as a measure of fire prevention.

Each bedroom is equipped with a large closet and also has cross ventilation.

The Cost to Build This Home

It is impossible to estimate accurately the cost of building this house in the country because the amount of hauling to be done, the amount of labor required by the farmer, the quality of finish and equipment, and degree of completion varies to a great extent, depending upon locality and conditions under which the house will be built. The house has been adequately designed, and should not be expensive to build.

For example, kitchens in farm houses must be larger than those in city dwellings. In certain areas some of the year meals must be served to a larger number of people. This requires either an unusually large dining room or combination dining and living room.

Special Farm Features

A wide room porch is an essential. A washroom for the family comes into the house after working in fields in inclemency. There must be more storage space for foods than is required in the average city dwelling.

In this house you will find all of these features and in addition the house itself has a very special charm in exterior appearance.

The house was planned to be built of frame construction with wood shingle exterior. A full basement is provided.

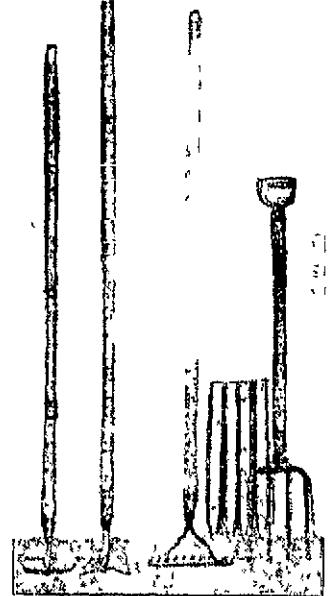

Of special interest to homeowners is the large kitchen and many commodious closets along the combination washroom and laundry on the first floor.

Plant Foods Must Be Kept on Hand

Fertilizers Are Just as Essential in Small Home Garden as Seeds.

Chased from the store, the metal parts will be bright and new, and as a rule, the handles have no paint or other dressing upon them. It is a good plan to give the handles a thorough coating with shellac, as this will help keep the moisture from penetrating them. The blades should be kept bright and clean and oiled with any good grease, to which is added about one part lime to three parts oil in order to counteract any free acids that may be present in the oil. Just oil alone does not make a good coating, for bright surfaces like the top held continual in the oil may cause the handle to rust even with a thoroughly coated with the grease and lime will correct this acid condition of the oil. Keeping the tools in a dry place is most important in connection with their preservation. Never under any circumstances should a spade or spading fork be left standing in the soil as the chemical elements of the soil will immediately attack the steel and a good spade may be completely ruined by standing in the soil overnight.

HARDY PERENNIALS

In planting hardy perennials on the home grounds they should be planted in regular clumps at appropriate openings in the shrubbery groups but not in hedges or shrubs either along the shrubbery, the foundation of the house or the borders of the lawn.

COTTAGE GARDENER

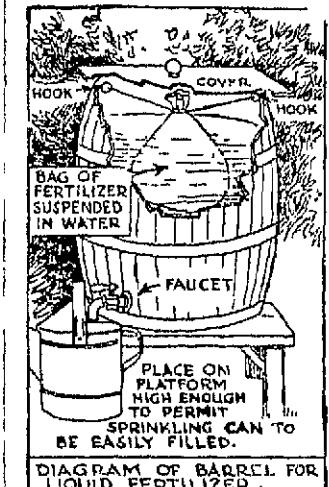

Need Only Simple Tools for Garden

Spade, Rake and Hoe Will Be Sufficient for Your Small Space.

Nearly every hardware store and practically all of the seed houses keep a supply of garden tools for sale. The amateur gardener is often tempted to purchase a larger number of tools than is justified by the results obtained in a small garden. The three most essential tools recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture are a spade or spading fork, a hoe, and a rake. The question as to whether a spade or spading fork should be purchased will depend upon the character of the soil. If the soil is heavy and of a clay nature a spade will be best for turning it up, but if it is gravelly, sandy or loamy the spading fork will put it in better condition than will the spade. When it comes to the selection of a hoe, just a plain, thin bladed hoe but about 6 or 7 inches in width will do. A pointed or marking hoe may be rather desirable, but the marks in which to plant seeds can practically all be made with the corner of the regular hoe. A rake is needed for pulverizing the soil and here again the plainest and simplest type of steel rake is best.

In selecting any of these tools the quality of the material in the blade or metal part and a good straight grained, smooth handle are the essentials. To fit the tools the gardener can easily add a few simple implements of his own manufacturing. These may consist of a couple of wood n staves and a line of no strong cord a pulley made from a single or thin piece of wood and a little scratches made by driving sharp wire through the end of a piece of lath. The line should be used for all planting in order to have the rows straight, the pulley is suitable for setting the plants and the scratches is a useful for weeding between small plants.

When the tools such as spade or digging fork, hoe and rake are not

COBB STILL ATHLETE AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Finished Strong Last Fall and Can Go Another Year.

Ty Cobb came striding down Peacock Hill at the Congress hotel, in Chicago. There was no mistaking the Georgia Peach. There was grace in his walk. There was suggestion of the strength and dash he has shown on the bases all his baseball life.

Even the slightly aching knee that plagued him in the morning Peacock Hill gave him an extra glance. He was different from the other athletes in the hotel parade, writes Roger Pippen in the Baltimore News.

Twenty years of baseball 20 years of desperate climbing 20 years of giving every ounce of his energy didn't show in the frame of this star from the South.

As he drew closer his face tells what his well knit frame likes. He is perceptively getting old. Lines are creasing out from the eyes, the tilt going out the jaws, the 20 years are plainly marked.

The Georgia Peach stops and answers a question about the recent report that he would retire from active competition next spring and manage Detroit from the bench.

Not so. He will play just one more year. He finished strong in the race last fall and feels that he can go one more year at top speed.

He has determined on one thing, he will not drag out his career until he is but a shadow of his former prowess and the fans fear him for being unable to run fast and to hit as of old. He never wants to hear the word "has-been" clinging to his ears without a bit of degradation to say he can't quite what he is so good.
